What did he do?

Jan Tschichold played a significant role in development of Graphic Design in the 20th century. By developing his modernistic typographic principles of Minimalistic Assymetry, Negative Sapce, and leading lines, Jan became a representer of "The New Typographic" style.

Tschichold was also famous for the typefaces he's created over the years. He would most commonly dabble in san-serif fonts because of thier sleek styles that machth his typographic proccess. But ironically his most famous type face is the old-style, serif font, Sabon made in the 1960's. That's pretty cool I guess.
